Bark Lake subdivision moves forward

By Mark Arike

Staff writer

The long-delayed Bark Lake cottage subdivision may soon become a reality.

The Ministry of Natural Resources and Forestry (MNRF) is poised to give its blessing to a plan that will see 83 single-family cottage lots on a 650-acre property in Irondale. The site is currently home to the Bark Lake Leadership Centre, which will close.

John Ariens, the agent for the property owners, told county council last week that the Ministry's concerns about species at risk, which have held up the project for the last three years, have been satisfied. "It's been a ... lengthy process and hopefully it will culminate next month with a recommendation for draft plan approval," he said.

The camp originally opened its doors in 1948 as the Ontario Camp Leadership Centre. In the early 1980s, the provincial government decided to close the facility, Ariens told The Highlander. The Izumi Brothers (Bob and Wayne), along with other investors, purchased the property with plans to turn it into a private hunting and fishing facility. Those plans didn't materialize and Columbia International College, the country's largest private junior and senior boarding school, purchased it in the late 1990s.

"Columbia has been using it for their own ... purposes, and also been renting it out to other schools," Ariens said.

According to the centre's website, it hosts about 1,000 students from more than 20 different countries each summer.

About a decade ago, the owner determined that youth leadership was no longer a financially feasible endeavour, said Ariens. It then hired IBI Group, a Hamilton-based planning, engineering and technology company, to come up with alternatives.

In 2006, the property was zoned for a See "Leadership" on page 3

Lack of child care troubling: report

By Mark Arike
Staff writer

With 23 per cent of children living in poverty in Haliburton County, more health and social programs need to be implemented for low-income families.

This and other alarming statistics were presented to County Council on March 23 as part of the Poverty Reduction Strategy, led by the City of Kawartha Lakes and Haliburton County.

"This means that nearly one in four children in Haliburton County are living in a household where the after tax income is less than 50 per cent of the median family income," said Aaron Mulcaster, data analysis coordinator for the Ontario Early Years Centre. Mulcaster was joined by Rod Sutherland, director of human services for the City of Kawartha Lakes.

In 2013, the median family income in Ontario was $76,510, according to Statistics Canada.

In the past year, 170,000 meals have been served to children at local schools through the Food for Kids nutrition program. However, since school isn't in session during the summer months, Mulcaster is recommending the expansion of that program to include summer.

One of the most troubling figures focused on child care; there aren't any licensed child care spaces available for children zero to 18 months of age.

"These figures caught me and my colleagues off-guard," said Mulcaster, adding that about 100 children born in the county this year won't have child care.

One of the recommendations is to advocate for a universal child care system.

"In the meantime, we are recommending increasing the number of licensed child care spaces," he said.

Mulcaster explained that the lack of child care makes it difficult for parents to decide between going back to work – and barely covering the cost of child care – or staying home.

Other statistics show that children from low-income households often struggle in school. In 2012, 28 per cent of children in the county and the City of Kawartha Lakes were considered "vulnerable," according to the Early Development Instrument survey.

"This means that 28 per cent of children scored in the lowest ten percentile in at least one of the five developmental domains."

Kindergarten children are evaluated in five domains, which include: physical health and well-being; emotional maturity; social confidence; language and cognitive development, and communication skills and general knowledge.

"Those are some daunting numbers," said County Warden Carol Moffatt.

"There's some sobering stuff there," added Councillor Brent Devolin, who is a member of the poverty reduction steering committee.

One of Devolin's goals is to determine what can be done at the local level to improve the situation.

"Not everything is doable, and some...are long-term objectives," he said.

The committee will present a report to county council in April. It will include options on how to proceed with specific initiatives or recommendations.

To date, councils have endorsed the following action plans: housing, transportation, food security, and employment and education.

Flood watch remains in effect for local lakes

By Mark Arike
Staff writer

With anywhere between 25 and 50 mm of rain in the forecast, the Ministry of Natural Resources and Forestry (MNRF) has extended a flood watch for the Gull and Burnt River watersheds.

The rainfall was expected yesterday and today.

"The [water] levels now are high for sure," said Kris Windover, an integrated resources management specialist with the local MNRF office. "[They're] above average for this time of year."

An updated press release had not been issued as of Wednesday morning, but Windover confirmed the watch would remain in effect because of the forecast.

A flood watch was announced on March 28, advising residents to "keep a close watch on conditions, regularly check for updated messages and stay away from fast-moving rivers and streams."

Last Friday's ice storm, combined with the remaining snow on the ground, are contributing factors to water levels.

"There's still quite a bit of snowpack that remains in different parts of the watershed, and there's still water remnants of that ice storm we received last week," said Windover. "It hasn't gone away... and it's very consolidated."

With the combination of precipitation and remaining ice cover on lakes and rivers, it is possible that ice jams will form and contribute to elevated water levels and flooding, according to a release from March 28.

Residents who are in flood prone areas should ensure sump pumps are functioning and secure items that might float away as levels rise. Windover expects conditions will remain the same until next week.

Together, the Gull and Burnt River watersheds comprise 30 lakes.

Leadership camp to become cottage subdivision

135-unit development consisting of 48 single-family lots, 63 townhouse units and a 24-unit apartment building.

"The ownership model that was sought at that time was for fractured ownership," Ariens said.

Despite Columbia's marketing efforts, and several studies, it was determined that fractured ownership wouldn't work. They asked IBI Group to look at transforming the property into a residential development.

To proceed, they needed to obtain approval from the MNRF for a species at risk permit.

"You're all familiar with snake fencing and turtle crossings ... and that has all been incorporated into a fairly detailed environmental impact study."

These reports have been submitted to the MNRF and Ariens said he has been told the minister is "poised to sign this permit."

The development was scaled back to allow species such as the Blanding's Turtle to continue to nest in the area.

"The plan remains viable," he stressed. "The plan does take advantage of all the common features that are on this property."

This includes a beach area, sewage treatment plant and a community centre (a building that currently houses a cafeteria and meeting spaces). They said all become "common elements" owned by a condominium corporation, he said. An agreement will be reached with the Municipality of Highlands East for the maintenance and upkeep of the water sewage and treatment plant.

"There are safeguards in place to deal with all of the physical features of the site."

Highlands East Council supports the draft approval of the subdivision plan, subject to a number of conditions, according to Charlsey White, planning director for the County of Haliburton. The MNRF has no objections to the application, provided certain conditions are met.

"All reports and studies filed in support of the plan of subdivision have been reviewed and the conclusions have been accepted by the reviewing agencies and peer review consultants," said White.

Six different studies have been completed, including an environmental impact assessment, a planning justification report and an archaeological assessment.

At the council meeting, only two people spoke, including Maria Paterson, program director at the centre. Paterson, who said she was speaking in opposition, inquired about plans for the marsh and the breeding grounds around the current dining hall area.

"This isn't really the forum for you to engage in a discussion about that," said County Warden Carol Moffatt. She said White would make note of Paterson's question.

Ariens assured Paterson that the project takes those concerns into account.

"That's where the specially-designed fencing and culverts will be used to help channel ... so those critters can in fact cross the road or under the road, safely. It's all part of the species at risk permit that the ministry is hopefully granting in the near future," he said.

White will present a report containing recommendations and conditions of approval on April 27, said Ariens, who will be in attendance.

"We will be there, hopefully in agreement with all of the conditions and [prepared to] ask council to approve the development with those conditions," he said in an interview.

Once all of the conditions are satisfied, they can begin selling lots. It is too early to tell how much the cottages will be sold for.

"There will be further marketing analysis," Ariens said.

A pause or an ending?

I never had the opportunity to attend a Forest Festival.

With all the hubbub over the court case between the Haliburton Forest and the Municipality of Dysart et al, it has been hard to ignore the social media outcry and the effects it has had on our community.

I know I wrote about this issue two weeks ago, but now with the cancellation of the Forest Festival, we see how everyone is being punished for this dispute.

Just think of all the time spent arguing about who is right and who is wrong. All the lawyers' bills. All to determine whether or not buildings should stay.

The Forest Festival advisory committee was working on its 10th anniversary show. The website called it a "mixture of the performing arts within the incomparable wilderness beauty of Haliburton Forest & Wild Life Reserve."

Nine years of concerts had been hosted safely between the Bone Lake Amphitheatre and in the Logging Museum – a building, incidentally, that has now been ordered torn down.

The lineup this year was to feature Buffy Sainte-Marie, Ian Tamblyn, Jimmy Rankin, The Nylons, Jim Cuddy and Melissa Bel, according to Stuart Laughton, the festival's founder and artistic director.

What an amazingly talented group of singers and songwriters! Each one would have brought out locals and cottagers for a night of camaraderie and celebration.

When we posted that the festival was cancelled, more than 50 people commented. One of them said, "Nice to see we are no different than the big cities when it comes to laying down the law. Are you really telling me no fine and solution could be negotiated? For people outside of the area, the Festival was one of the highest profile events of the summer. Was the impact to the county as a whole given any consideration?"

I think the answer came loud and clear during the public meeting on March 18. Our short video of the interaction between Peter Schleifenbaum and Dysart council reached more than 13,000 people, many of whom still have unanswered questions.

A festival is simply defined as an organized series of concerts, plays, or movies, typically held annually in the same place. If these buildings are torn down to set an example for past transgressions or because of how individuals feel personally about one another, it will demolish so much more than the physical structures.

Laughton said the Forest Festival advisory committee's hope is that the cancellation of this year's festival is a pause rather than an ending, and that "we can continue to bring artists and audiences together in the heart of the Forest in the future."

Progress is hindered when our differences can't be set aside for the greater good of our society. I am not naive; I understand that rules are rules. But I also understand the human spirit.

The human spirit encapsulates the spiritual or mental part of humanity. When the human spirit is constantly stomped on to enforce the rules created by our governments, people become less and less engaged and more sceptical about whether decisions are really being made in their best interests.

Admitting that we are hurting so much is admitting we are all missing the forest for the trees.

Another brick in the wall

So, there I was, down on the floor with my six-year-old grandson, Anashe.

Let's build something with Lego, he suggested, jumping up and running to retrieve the blocks.

Ah, Lego. I remember spending many an hour on the floor with my son, 30 years ago. That was way back when getting down and up off the floor was a much simpler task and when Lego building was a much simpler enterprise. There were red blocks and yellow ones, some green, some windows and doors too. A flat panel provided the building platform. The task at hand was simple. Build some walls, add spaces for door and windows and small figurines to stand on and grace the final project. It was an ideal father and son activity – building stuff.

At the risk of becoming too maudlin, I recall in my own youth, Lincoln Logs with which one could construct a log cabin. No cherry tree included, or wooden bricks that vaguely resembled the yet to be invented Lego blocks. They sort of worked and did the job of keeping me occupied while my father provided construction tips.

Well, when Anashe returned, he brought a book with a series of diagrams explaining how to build a Star Wars AT-RT Walker in 51 easy steps. This imaginative space attack vehicle from the fertile mind of George Lucas was a far cry from the crude domicile I recall building with earlier editions of this toy. Then he raced out of the room again and returned with a box chock-a-block with Lego pieces, hundreds of them all rolling around together. I later discovered that this mélange of multi-coloured pieces represented the leavings of eight or nine Lego Star Wars projects that had been built and then dismantled into this box. Among this jumble of bits and pieces there was a WT-RT Walker waiting to be discovered.

Lego, which has been making the ubiquitous plastic blocks now for more than 50 years, has emerged as a giant in children's toy merchandising. Oh, they still sell bricks and house construction materials, but they have carved out a very healthy niche in the specialty and licensing sector. The company owns theme parks, produces its own full-length movies, and signs deals with Star Wars and Harry Potter, among others, to further extend its reach. It is estimated the company has produced over 400 billion pieces of Lego or 62 pieces for every person on the planet. According to those who need to know these things, there are close to 10,000 different pieces of Lego while others suggest the number is closer to 30,000, depending on how one defines "different."

Whatever the number, it appeared to me that most of them were in the box that stood beside the simple 51-step instructions. Our job was simply to winnow [out] the pieces we needed from the ones from other projects and snap them together. Did I mention that some of those pieces were extremely small and many required to make the AT-RT Walker were one of kind, meaning there was no substituting one piece for another? We needed to find the original pieces to complete this project.

As I fumbled through the 15 layers of Lego, it was like an archeological dig. The pieces were pushed aside as we looked for the ones we needed. It was like the proverbial needle in a haystack, but fortunately, I was working with an expert. As the pieces were sifted, Anashe would call out. "There's one ... another ... we'll need that later."

With nimble fingers, he retrieved the needed parts and started assembling, leaving me to continue the search. With patience and perseverance the AT-RT started to take shape. In due course the machine was all but completed, with a few missing non-essential blocks, and we were proudly calling adults into the room to admire our handiwork.

Just like the old days, I thought to myself. Some quality time on the floor with a six year old, and a project completed. However, this time I was going to need someone to help me up off the floor.

A random act of kindness

Dear editor;

A couple of Saturday afternoons ago, a few of us ladies and two young teens had great fun bowling at Fast Lane Bowling in Minden.

For some of us, it was our first time, while others hadn't bowled in years. It was evident that this was the case to those around us, but nevertheless we enjoyed a lot of laughs at our own expense.

The highlight of the day for us, though, was when Mary (the owner of Fast Lane) came over to us with eyes sparkling. With great enthusiasm and a gigantic smile, she proceeded to rip up the bill in front of us.

We had not really taken notice of the fellows in the lane next to us, other than to note that they were having a great time as well. These gentlemen paid our entire bill. After getting over the disbelief that someone was so kind to us, we went on our merry way and needless to say, we were feeling very blessed.

I don't know who these men were, but they made our day. Thank you, kind sirs.

Sincerely,
Wanda Robinson

Just a typical spring day in the Highlands.

Rubbed the wrong way

I failed, miserably.

I made a green salad the other day to accompany lunch. "Nothing too difficult", I hear you say, and I didn't think so either. Some arugula, cucumber, kale and avocado. A bit of chopping, a little washing and hey, presto: salad. I even made a dressing, a really nice one, with some of the gorgeous maple syrup that we'd picked up from Mr. and Mrs. Beatty that very morning. But I failed, and I could see it on my lovely wife's face as soon as she took her first bite.

"Did you massage the kale?" she asked.

I coughed back a mouthful of salad as I laughed hard at her obvious joke, but her face didn't break into a grin. She began to ask again.

"Did you massaa..."

"WHAT!" I blurted out. "Massage the salad! Are you kidding?"

My lovely wife smiled sweetly, and explained how I should have tenderized the leafy goodness that I now realised I was still chewing on a good minute or two after putting it into my mouth.

Now, I consider myself a man who knows his food and appreciates a thoughtfully prepared meal. For Pete's sake, I like to hunt most of my own meat. I grow veggies and pick wild fruits. I like a nice wine, and I insist on only the best in beer (which is relatively easy because, as a certain friend of mine, says, "there ain't no thing as a bad beer!")

And, I really enjoy cooking all of these wonderful ingredients, and making meals that I'm proud to serve to my family and friends.

But massage kale! Who ever heard of anything so ridiculous?

I'm also not averse to trying anything in the name of a tasty treat. I've dined on delicately fried razor clams at an ocean-side restaurant in Portugal. I've crunched on crispy fried pigs' ears. I've munched on hand-made pasta sprinkled with shavings of white truffle in a tiny place in Tuscany. I've eaten in Michelin-starred restaurants and tasted the latest press at historic vineyards. I've cooked soufflé and prepared cow's tongue terrine. I've scooped succulent sea urchin right out of its shell, nibbled on frogs' legs and even made stinging nettle soup.

But massage kale...

I know the best of foods and I'm also keen to try the worst. I mean, who would have thought French fries, cheese curd and gravy would be good? Or hotdog water, now there was a revelation. Still not sure about the greasy treat that is a beaver tail, though.

But massage a salad vegetable, that's plain ridiculous. Any vegetable that requires that amount of attention just to make it edible in a salad should be fed to the pigs. Don't get me wrong, I'm not against pigs, or a little work in the name of making my veggies edible. I like the green stuff and a blanching or a quick toss in a wok, why not to taste them all the better? Roasting is serious stuff, too, but my root veg thank me for it, I'm sure.

And when it comes to meat... Well, we've all heard of Kobe beef, I'm sure, and I'll tell you that if it is true that those cows are massaged then bravo to the masseurs because they do a wonderful job. A less than prime cut of steak always benefits from a bit of hard labour, too, with a hammer or rolling pin on the part of the chef. And nothing is better than spatchcocking a chicken. Now, now, it's perfectly legal – nothing to be ashamed about, gents. The bird is dead, and [this way] it fits perfectly on the BBQ!

You see, I'm all for the finer things in life and food. I understand that there are some things that take more time, need more preparation, and the results are all the better for it. But kale? Really? Not on my watch.

The trouble was, my lovely wife was right, of course. She made the same salad the next day, and I watched her wash and then gently massage the kale in its dressing, just for a minute or two. There was no pummeling or digging in of the elbows, and no baby oil, just the olive variety. A few well-placed squeezes, then it was done. The result, a green salad with no extra chewy bits, and it tasted sweeter, too. It was so lovely, I almost had to admit it.

Man charged with racing and impaired driving

By Alex Coop

Staff writer

Scott Dukeshire, 36, of Ingersoll, was charged with driving while impaired and racing after a Haliburton Highlands Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) officer pulled him over for speeding.

Just before midnight on March 26, the OPP officer noticed a black Hyundai travelling at a high rate of speed on Highway 35 near Lutterworth Pines Road in the Township of Minden Hills.

The accused's vehicle was clocked on radar at approximately 135 km/h in an 80 km/h zone.

The officer pulled him over and, after speaking to the driver, determined that the man's ability to operate his vehicle was impaired by alcohol.

Dukeshire was then arrested, and his vehicle was impounded. His license was seized and suspended for seven days under stunt driving legislation.

The accused was also served a 90-day administrative driver's licence suspension for the impaired charge as well as others.

He was also charged with failing to have insurance.

Dukeshire was released from custody and will appear at the Ontario Court of Justice in Minden on May 4.

Field Naturalists host meeting at fish hatchery

By Alex Coop

Staff writer

An enthusiastic group of residents were given a tour of the fish hatchery during the Haliburton Highlands Field Naturalists (HHFN) monthly general meeting last week. Some 40 people attended.

“...People vaguely knew what the fish hatchery was ... but no one really knew anything in depth,” said HHFN board member Shirley Morden. “[As] it’s a local organization, we decided to have the meeting there.”

In addition to the hatchery tour, volunteers Mike Johnson and Mike Miller explained how they get the fish through egg collection, and how the fish hatchery fits into the community.

At the meeting, HHFN member Susan Hay offered a local perspective on the dangers birds face in our community, specifically the problem of them flying into windows. Hay also suggested ways people could help.

“She talked about how you can put decals on your windows,” said HHFN board member Gus Janca.

The field naturalists’ next meeting will be at the Haliburton Highlands Museum on April 7 at 7 p.m. It will focus on wildlife crime in Ontario with specific references to turtle poaching and reptile smuggling.

Dysart council gives drum carnival the green light

By Alex Coop
Staff writer

It's a safe bet that this Labour Day weekend in Haliburton is going to be colourful.

Joseph Truss and Christine Cullen of Abbey North Drummers proposed what they called a "unique cultural activity" to the Municipality of Dysart et al on Tuesday.

"We want to create a spectacular annual carnival," Truss told councillors, who seemed receptive to the idea. "It is more about audience participation and less about the actual performances that will be taking place."

The proposed event is a drum carnival called Halibana 2016, reminiscent of Toronto's Caribana Festival.

The idea is to bring a few of the designers and organizers involved with the popular event in Toronto to Haliburton, and surround Head Lake Park and the Rails End Gallery with multiple workshops that range from drum restoration to costume design.

A parade and drum circle at Head Lake Park will be the main attraction.

"Part of the experience for people will be seeing how big events like this are organized," Truss said.

"Haliburton already has a budding drum culture, we've been doing drum circles at the Rails End Gallery for a number of years."

During his PowerPoint presentation, Truss presented a tight budget that he said would accommodate the event's extensive scope, but reassured councillors that alterations to the event can be made.

The proposed budget is $46,510, which includes the project's overall management, workshop facilitation and artistic direction.

Grants from the Ontario Trillium Foundation, Ontario Arts Council and various other organizations will cover the majority of costs, Truss said, combined with corporate sponsorships and cash donations.

Alongside the requested space at Head Lake Park, Cullen and Truss asked councillors for assistance with washrooms and clean up.

"We want your feedback," he said.

Dysart Reeve Murray Fearrey said the idea sounded promising, but asked about the project's marketing, which was only budgeted for $1,400.

"How exactly do you want to promote this?" He asked.

Truss said the event is a "community building project" and would rely on traditional advertising methods in the newspaper and radio, along with the advertising that is being done in nearby townships.

"Our goal is definitely to bring tourism and other residents in."

Abbey North Drummers was founded in 2006 to help raise awareness and support social causes including ending the HIV/AIDS pandemic in Africa and the de-legitimization of war.

HHSS grabs Pasta Challenge trophy

By Mark Arike

Staff writer

The county's food banks were the big winners of this year's Great Pasta Challenge. And Haliburton Highlands Secondary School (HHSS) has the trophy to prove it.

With the support of staff, community and students, HHSS was victorious in this year's Great Pasta Challenge.

It was the first time the school has won the school board-wide challenge, which ran from Feb. 15 to 29.

"When I heard our numbers, I thought we were going to win for sure because I hadn't heard numbers like that before," recalled Tori

Hawley, Grade 12 student and G7 council representative.

Although Fenelon Falls collected more pasta overall, it didn't amount to as much per head. HHSS collected 7.92 boxes per student for a total of 3,612 boxes, while Fenelon Falls ended up with 6.8 units per student.

All of the pasta has been distributed to the county's food banks.

HHSS would like to thank Brad Park of Haliburton Foodland and Steve Todd of Todd's Independent Grocer for their generous contributions.

The trophy will remain at the school until next year's challenge.

Going purple for epilepsy

By Mark Arike

Staff writer

In support of epilepsy awareness, local employees traded in their uniforms for purple attire March 26.

Staff at the Pinestone Resort, McKecks Tap & Grill, the Kosy Korner and Spa in the Highlands wore Katie's Run T-shirts, highlighting an annual event that has raised $60,000 to date for epilepsy research.

Businesses also decorated with balloons and streamers, and distributed bracelets and postcards. As well, patrons at McKecks were asked to add a $2 donation to their bill for Katie's Run.

Purple Day is an "international grassroots effort dedicated to increasing awareness about epilepsy worldwide." According to Purple Day's website, there are more than 300,000 Canadians living with epilepsy and some 50 million people worldwide with the condition.

New bereavement coordinator joins SIRCH

By Mark Arike

Staff writer

Shelley Richardson knows all too well what it's like to experience grief.

Her mother died from cancer when she was only 14 years old. Eleven years ago, her son passed away in a car accident at the age of 19.

A Halls Lake resident for the past three-and-a-half years, Richardson recently became the new bereavement coordinator for SIRCH Community Services in Haliburton. She replaced Marilyn Rydberg, who started the program a few years ago and retired in December.

Richardson's most recent tragedy was a turning point in her career, taking her from administrative jobs to running peer support groups for bereaved families at Seasons Centre for Grieving Children in Barrie. She has been working with children, teens and adults for the past nine years.

"It was a change I needed," said Richardson. "I [had] to do something that would be more rewarding."

Richardson believes that experience gained in her most recent job will be useful in leading SIRCH's bereavement program.

"I have worked with hundreds of people now – all with different types of losses," she said.

These include accidents, illness, suicide and murder.

"I guess just having a lot of experience working with a lot of different people, you really see how unique everybody is in the way that they grieve."

Richardson helped recruit and train dozens of volunteers at the Seasons Centre.

SIRCH's program offers three free Journey through Grief group workshops, with some limited individual support. They are for anyone who is grieving the loss of a loved one. There are currently nine trained volunteers in the program.

"It's totally confidential, it's a safe environment," pointed out Richardson.

Since there is no current funding available, Richardson will work one-and-a-half days a week. She will continue working part-time in Barrie until June.

"It [the program] is needed in this community for sure," said Gena Robertson, SIRCH's executive director. She would like to be able to expand the program.

The Journey through Grief groups run for 10 weeks every spring and fall at SIRCH Central, located at 2 Victoria St. in Haliburton. Participants discuss the feelings they're going through and share ways to cope with a loss. The peer support approach allows them to give each other ideas, strength and support, Richardson said.

SIRCH has received a lot of positive feedback about the program.

"I feel like these groups have helped me to get to know myself, to rethink what I want to do with my life without my husband," said one participant in a testimonial. "I know I will be able to go on. I feel strong enough to do that now. I may even be able to help others."

Shelley Richardson brings nine years of relevant work experience to SIRCH.

Richardson is enjoying the job and is looking forward to supporting as many people as possible. She is planning on staying around for the long-term.

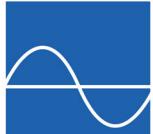

"I've always loved being up here," she smiled. "It gives me such a sense of peace and there's really nowhere else I'd rather be."

The next Journey through Grief workshops start in April. For more information call Shelley Richardson at 705-457-1742 ext. 25 or email shelley\_richardson@sirch.on.ca.

Tasty enough for television

By Jennifer Hughey

Editor

It's not just the owners of the Riverside Inn who think you should eat there. TV host John Catucci agrees.

James Burton and Margy Taylor, who have owned the restaurant on Highway 35 in Norland for nearly six years, were recently chosen to be featured on the Food Network Canada show, You Gotta Eat Here!

The show highlights restaurants and eateries from all over Canada, and is hosted by a Canadian comedian-actor-singer, Catucci.

Last year, the president and CEO of Lone Eagle Entertainment, Michael Geddes, took his wife, Lisa, to the Riverside Inn for dinner.

"[Geddes] was in here having dinner and started talking to us about the show," Burton recalled. They knew about the show and so were excited about the opportunity.

It was Geddes who recommended the restaurant owners apply to the popular Food Network show.

"He was in on a Saturday and had his people call us on the [following] Tuesday," said Burton.

He added it was a four-week process to audition for the show. He had to show Geddes and his team pictures of the menu and explain the ingredients in every dish.

"They do about 80 restaurants a year, and they have to pitch all the restaurants to the network," he said.

The television crew will take over the restaurant on April 26 and 27.

"The first day is when they will do all the filming in the kitchen and the second is when they film the front of the house."

Burton said he was told their Thai bowl will be featured along with their bison burger with fig and onion reduction.

"We aren't sure after that," Burton said. "... our most popular dishes would be our crispy beef, [our] butter chicken and of course, our homemade 10 oz. burgers."

Chef Ryan Tomlinson will be preparing the dishes that day along with Brenda Notle and Burton.

"I have been in the business for around 35 years and have owned six restaurants," Burton said. "Margy has been in the business for about seven years ... and this is the first time we have been recognized for our dedication and hard work [on television]."

Burton feels that he and Taylor could not have accomplished what they have in the past five years without their current staff.

"We feel they are a big part of our success and they are the best around, as far as Margy and [I] are concerned," Burton said.

You Gotta Eat Here! is currently in its fifth season and airs at 9 p.m. on Food Network Canada. The Riverside Inn episode will air sometime in the fall. Burton said the patio will be open as long as the weather permits. The Riverside Inn can seat 16 people on the patio, which has a great view of the Gull River.

The Fifth Annual Haliburton Documentary Film Festival

ALL THE TIME IN THE WORLD

10:00 AM - 88 min

In search of a new perspective, a family of five leaves the comforts of home to live in the Yukon wilderness during the long northern winter. The parents leave their jobs and take their three children, ages 10, 8 and 4, to spend nine months in a small cabin with no road access, no electricity, no running water, no Internet, no TV, no phone and, most importantly, no clocks or watches. Featuring the unique perspectives of the children, All the Time in the World explores the theme of disconnecting from our hectic and technology-laden lives in order to reconnect with ourselves, each other, and our natural environment.

DISCONNECTING TO RECONNECT

A documentary film by Suzanne Crocker

"To get the freedom of time again, we had to free ourselves from the structure of time - and see what would happen."

HOW TO CHANGE THE WORLD

1:30 PM - 110 min

In 1971 a brave group of young activists set sail from Vancouver in an old fishing boat. Their mission: to stop Nixon's atomic bomb. It was from these humble but courageous beginnings the global organization we now know as Greenpeace was born. Chronicling the fascinating untold story behind the modern environmental movement, this gripping film tells the story of eco-hero Robert Hunter and how he, alongside a group of like-minded and idealistic young friends in the '70s, would be instrumental in altering the way we now look at the world and our place within it.

MERU

4:00 PM - 90 min

Gripping visually as well as narratively, this rare documentary proves thought-provoking while offering thrilling wide-screen vistas. Sitting 21,000 feet above the sacred Ganges River in Northern India, Mount Meru's perversely stacked obstacles make it both a nightmare and an irresistible calling. Three elite climbers struggle to find their way through obsession and loss as they attempt to climb one of the most coveted prizes in the high stakes game of Himalayan big wall climbing. MERU is the story of an expedition through nature's harshest elements, complicated inner demons, and ultimately on to impossible new heights.

BLIND SPOT: MOMENTS UNSEEN

7:30 PM - 90 min

Followed by Q&A with Director Stefan Morel & Producer Leslie Haller

There is more to seeing than sight. This award-winning vision-quest documentary features three visually impaired adventurers who journey by horseback into the heart of the Andes. The environment awakens the blind riders' and their sighted guides' untapped senses. This juxtaposition of perceptions expands our perspective on how to interpret everyday obstacles. Blind Spot: Moments Unseen defies the conventional views on blindness to chronicle a voyage of self-discovery: what we see, what we can't see, and what we overlook.

Filmmaker Suzanne Crocker sets up a shot.

Finding one of life's last luxuries in an isolated cabin: time

By Bob LaMer
Contributing writer

Getting away from it all. It's a common yearning many of us have to break free of our hectic day-to-day lives and the constant tug of technology. Since the dawn of civilization, people have sought isolation to reconnect with themselves, and the world around them. But the easier travel becomes, the more difficult it is to truly escape.

Tired of relentless demands on her time, escape is exactly what filmmaker Suzanne Crocker did. Crocker told The Highlander she had already left her job as a family physician to pursue filmmaking, but still felt keenly the constant intrusion of the modern world on her time and her relationships with husband, Gerard Parsons, and their three small children.

A plan was hatched. They would go as a family into the Yukon wilderness for nine months, and live off-grid in a small cabin – no running water, no supermarkets, no phones or even clocks. And of course, no other people.

Crocker captured the entire experience in her documentary, All the Time in the World. It's an apt title for the film, shot by Crocker herself without script or crew. Five hundred hours of footage edited into a ninety-minute story of disconnecting from the world and reconnecting with each other.

The experience wasn't so much about living off the land as it was spending time together. There were plenty of supplies, and periodically Gerard would head into town – a day's journey – for more. Those trips, aside from the occasional bear encounter, were the only times Crocker worried.

"We didn't have any way to communicate," explains Crocker, "and there are a lot of unknowns in river travel. He sometimes didn't return on schedule, and my mind would turn to thoughts of him going through the ice or becoming stranded."

The kids, 4, 8 and 10 at the time, actually got along, inventing games and stories to keep themselves entertained. The younger two created a fantasy land of horses from fallen logs, while the eldest carved a car with his pen knife. Later, when the sun returned in spring, he built a sundial, only to later express remorse at breaking the "rules" of their adventure.

Five years after returning to civilization, Crocker says the experience has stayed with them. "We've decided not to own any cell phones in our family, and the kids don't have tablets. But we do use computers and email. The kids help me stay on track – calling me out if I'm not paying attention. And I still turn to the outdoors to gather my thoughts."

She also still refuses to wear a watch, finding it easier to be in the moment without a "trigger" on her wrist. Would they do it again? "In a heartbeat," says Crocker. "But I'm not sure about my husband. He struggled to find purpose in the bush, and it was harder on him. [Me?] I guess I would have liked to have had a friend close enough to visit, but otherwise there wasn't anything compelling me to return [to civilization]."

All the Time in the World has won 20 awards internationally, including the Audience Choice award for most popular Canadian documentary at the Vancouver International Film Festival. The film's success has Suzanne Crocker busier than ever, and the irony of that isn't lost on her. While she's managed to liberate herself from cell phones and wristwatches, she did make one concession to time, by putting a clock back on the wall of her Dawson City home. Back in civilization, time is once again in charge.

You can see All the Time in the World on Saturday, April 9 in Haliburton during the Doc(k) Day Documentary Film Festival. Festival tickets are $25 for four films, or $10 per film at the door. You don't have to be Tiger Woods to play golf in the Haliburton 55+ Summer Games. And you don't even have to be a golfer. Walkers are welcome.

For those interested in something that takes a bit less time than golf, you may want to consider the prediction walk event. According to co-convenor Mary Johnson, it's perfect for anyone 55 and older who enjoys walking.

"A lot of people walk for exercise," said Johnson. "They feel it's something they can do without playing a major sport. Everybody walks."

It works just as it sounds. Participants predict how long it will take to walk a certain distance. Regular walking and Nordic walking (with poles) are both options. Only volunteer scorekeepers will be able to have a stopwatch.

"If someone walks 45 minutes, and they predict it spot on, [he or she] comes first [for] predicting the correct time," she said.

Both men and women can participate in the challenge: the distances are three km for those age 55 and up, and 1.6 km for participants who are 75 and older. The Nordic walking options are one km and three km.

The event is on June 8 at 9 a.m. at the town dock in Haliburton. It will be rescheduled in the event of a downpour.

And then there's golf – where it's also not always about winning.

"Winning isn't the sole purpose of it," said co-convenor Doug McIntosh. "It's about meeting people, sharing stories and life history."

In 2004, McIntosh and his wife Muriel first got involved in the annual games as participants in contract bridge. One year they finished first and advanced to the provincial games in Port Colborne.

"When we got out of that, we said we need to get back to this because it's a lot of fun," said McIntosh, a 77-year-old resident of Brady Lake.

A lot of people walk for exercise ... they feel it's something they can do without playing a major sport.

"I would say this is right up at the top," said McIntosh.

As one of the organizers, he enjoys seeing athletes have a great time and working with a committed team of volunteers.

He became the golf convenor in 2005. Rudy Seider is his co-convenor.

The golf co-convenor role involves obtaining registrations, setting up the event and assembling the foursomes. Ten volunteers help with scorekeeping and other duties.

Until last year, individual scores determined placing. Now, the Callaway System is used. This is a handicapping method that is ideal for one-day events where golfers do not have handicaps.

The event is a shotgun start (all golfers tee off at the same time on different holes) with 18 holes being played.

Golfers will have a chance of winning $5,000 cash with two hole-in-one contests sponsored by Hudson Henderson Insurance Brokers. Prizes will also be awarded for other contests such as closest to the pin. For the $15 registration fee and a $55 golf fee, athletes will get a shared power cart, pop or water, and a hamburger or sausage for lunch.

The event takes place on June 14 at Blairhampton Golf Club in Minden. The rain date is June 16.

With 85 to 100 people taking part, the golf challenge is one of the largest one-day events in the games.

"I would say this is right up at the top," said McIntosh.

As one of the organizers, he enjoys seeing athletes have a great time and working with a committed team of volunteers.

2015-16 NOVICE YEAR IN REVIEW

A message from manager Darlene Armstrong

2015-2016 was a fantastic year for the Timber Mart Novice Highland Storm.

With only one returning player, a new goaltender and tough competition within the league, the Novice team knew they had their work cut out for them.

These challenges did not stop the team from proving that, with hard work, determination and a positive attitude, anything is possible. The team proved to be talented competitors.

Without exception, each player grew, developed their skills and learned the value of team work. This was evident at the end of the season as the team captured the "B" Championship in the Muskoka-Parry Sound Tournament and were Ontario Minor Hockey Association (OMHA) quarter-finalists.

The season would not have been such a success without our really supportive sponsor, our fantastic parents, the exceptional coaching staff and, of course, the players.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank them all, along with the Highland Storm Association and the community for their continued support.

See you at the arena next year!

3-Stars of the Novice Season

1 Graeme Armstrong LEFT DEFENSE

Graeme kicked off the 2015-16 season with an MVP-winning, hat-trick scoring performance at the Campbellford Colts Tournament, earning our inaugural first star of the season. Graeme was able to harness that early pressure, and turn his season into one filled with multiple points, and multiple three-star nominations, finishing the season with his fourth on March 10.

2 Kadin Card CENTRE

The Novice Highland Storm battled tough competition all season, but on the backs of their potent offence, they made it all the way to the Ontario Minor Hockey Association (OMHA) novice quarter-finals. Kadin had a standout performance at the Walt McKechnie Classic in Haliburton, where he was a point-a-game player, helping lead his team to the 'C' Championship.

3 Addison Carr LEFT WING

Addison's strong season was highlighted in mid-December when the Storm played the Powassan Hawks during a five-game weekend. The number of games didn't tire Addison as he recorded an impressive four goals in the Storm's 6-2 rout of the Hawks. The Storm finished that weekend with two wins, two losses and a tie.

Timbits teams sharpen their skills before provincials

By Mark Arike
Staff writer

With just three weeks to go until the Ontario Curling Association Timbits Provincials championship in Gananoque, youth curlers were developing their strategy at the Haliburton Curling Club on March 22.

"We want you to have fun," Hugh Nichol, volunteer coach and member of the club, told the group during an after-school practice. "But we're just trying to give you basic strategy."

Haliburton will be sending a record four local teams to the 29th annual event, which will be held from April 7 to 10. The 17 players are from J.D. Hodgson Elementary School.

Fifty-four teams from across the province will compete at the event, held at the Gananoque Curling Club.

Students enrolled in the Haliburton Curling Club's youth curling program have been going to the annual championship for the past few years. It's considered their culminating event.

With game day fast approaching, the excitement is starting to show.

"This year, I'm really hoping that we can make it to the gold-medal game," said 13-year-old Mackenzie Tidey, who is heading to her third Timbits event. She noted that her team finished third overall and won a bronze medal last year.

Tidey has been curling for the past four years. She got into the sport with encouragement from her family.

"I talked to them, and they inspired me," she said. "They told me it was really fun. I tried it, and I found a lot of kids liked it, including my friends. The first time I got on the ice, I knew I was going to do it for sure."

Tidey recalled the first Timbits event she attended three years ago. Although she was nervous at first, it didn't take long for her to become comfortable with her surroundings.

"It was fun," she smiled. "It was really nice to meet new people and get more experience. Having my friends on my team, by my side, was really nice because you really got to know more about them."

The former hockey player enjoys going out on the cold playing surface and likes competition. Curling has been a confidence booster for Tidey, who used to be very quiet.

"She was so quiet when we first started playing," recalled coach Terry Lawrence.

"I'm always told I'm one of the loudest people on the ice [now]," Tidey laughed.

It will be the first year for 12-year-old, Jacob Dobson. A member of the youth curling program for two years, Dobson was offered a spot on the team last year but couldn't go.

As a vice, Dobson's goal is to make as many shots as he can.

Curling in the club's program has helped him improve dramatically. He doubts he would be as far along if it weren't for the instructors.

"It's been really fun, and I've loved the experience," said Dobson. "I don't think I'd be as good as I am today without any of them."

He enjoys everything about the sport, especially the feeling of sliding out of the hack and releasing the stone. He plans on playing the sport long into the future and hopes to be part of next year's team.

"I'll try my best to make it."

According to coach Lawrence, the four teams have been practicing since December. He has witnessed first-hand the progress they've made since then.

"It's incredible," he said. "[For] some of these kids, the change in the last three months has been amazing."

The Timbits championship is open to all elementary schools in Ontario. Each team starts in the "A" division and is guaranteed they'll play a minimum of four games.

Izac Reid stands on the podium after winning the Sport 600 Sunday at the Horseshoe Valley Resort in Barrie.

Minden snowcross racer brings home the hardware

By Alex Coop

Staff writer

Mild weather last week didn't faze Minden teen snowcross racer Izac Reid, who capped his final weekend of racing the same way he entered it: atop the standings.

The 16-year-old took advantage of his eight-point lead heading into last weekend and for the first time in his young career, finished first overall in the Sport-600 class of the Canadian Snowcross Racing Association (CSRA).

"I was nervous on Saturday when I only had a five-point lead," Reid said, adding his training opportunities were very limited this season because of the unpredictable winter.

"Once I was on the track the feeling went away and I knew all I had to do was ride and finish the races."

The Haliburton Highlands Secondary School student was also faced with a twist to the typical CSRA season finale.

Due to increasingly poor conditions, event organizers decided to combine the final three events of the 2016 season into a single weekend.

The Conx2share National Snowcross race, Rockstar Energy National and Dayco National Snowcross championships were all held at the Horseshoe Valley Resort in Barrie from Friday to Sunday.

Accompanying him during the final stretch of the season were his parents Tim and Paula and many other friends.

Hundreds of spectators also lined the track and enjoyed the fast-paced action in unseasonably warm conditions.

"It was a good race atmosphere," Reid said.

Paula said she's received many comments about her son's development as a snowcross racer, many praising his technique and ability to grasp the details that help professionals win races.

"They talk about how smooth he rides," she said, but also acknowledged his ability to balance school and racing throughout the season.

"He's also changing as a person, his maturity has grown."

Reid said the standings were close during the entire season, and small mistakes could have cost him the championship.

"You have to ride smart," he said.

The friendships Reid formed throughout the season is another important part of the whole experience, his mother said.

His family cheers for everyone.

"But when you're on the race circuit everyone is in it for themselves," she said.

"No one holds any grudges though."

Reid's speedy-climb to the top of his class coupled with his minimal experience on the race circuit - Reid's first snowcross race was five years ago - is an indication that he's on the right path, Paula said.

Most racers begin at the age of five or six, she explained.

"His next goal is to become a semi-pro and pro in the CSRA."

But Reid doesn't want to stop there.

The young racer said he would like to compete in the United States.

To keep him in racing shape both physically and mentally during the summer, Reid will be turning to his dirt bike for assistance.

"I'm going to try and enter some [dirt bike] races for the first time this summer," he said.

The long grind of the CSRA season can be exhausting, Paula said, referring to the long road trips with their 45 foot-long trailer, which contains Reid's snowmobile and other racing gear.

"It is a long winter, but the races make it go by pretty fast," she said.

Reid and his family said they are grateful for the continued support from the community and their sponsors.

"We appreciate everything they do for us," Paula said.

Reid will be accepting his trophy at the CSRA's awards banquet on May 7 at the Nottawasaga Inn in Alliston.

HHSS hockey team loses at COSSA, coach still optimistic about future

By Alex Coop

Staff writer

The Varsity Red Hawks hockey squad fell short of the Ontario Federation of School Athletic Associations' (OFSAA) championship last week after losing in the COSSA challenge in Belleville last week.

"We were short a few bodies, which had an impact on our team," said Red Hawks head coach Ron Yake, of the meet-up at the Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association (COSSA) championship.

The Red Hawks' only game of the day was against local favourites, Centennial, and the 6-2 loss had nothing to do with lack of effort, Yake said.

"We were only down 2-1 heading into the third period," he said. "We did a good job of staying out of the penalty box, but then they scored early in the third and that was the turning point in the game."

"It was a good effort by our guys."

For the past 30 years, the HHSS boys' hockey program has been highly successful, reaching the OFSAA tournament five times.

In 2014, the team won bronze on the provincial stage.

Reaching OFSAA is the team's goal every year, Yake said, but a broken leg and a tear in the lung - two serious injuries sustained by players Matthew Wilbee and Owen Patterson-Smith, respectively - prevented the team from gaining traction as a complete unit.

The Red Hawks will be turning to their young players next year, since six or seven players will be graduating.

"That number is a little higher than other years," Yake said. "We usually lose about three or four each year."

The Red Hawks finished their season with a record of 10-9-2. Great job, guys!

Easter egg-stravaganza

By Mark Arike

Staff writer

Ice and snow couldn't stop children and their families from venturing to Curry Chevrolet to meet the Easter Bunny on March 25. The local car dealer hosted its second annual Easter Egg Hunt, which was held on its property off County Road 21 in Haliburton.

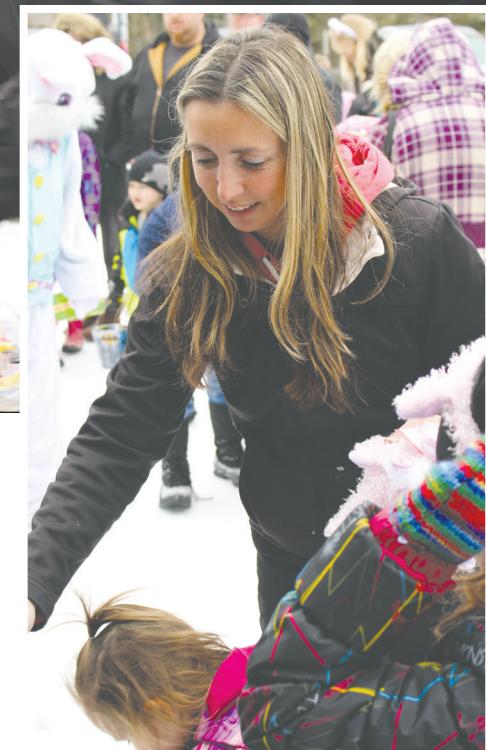

More than 140 children and families registered for the event, according to organizer Cheryl Smith.

"We've had a great turnout," said Smith, pointing out that many parents called to see if the event was still happening because of the weather.

Smith explained that Bill and Julie Campbell, owners of Curry Chevrolet, started the event to reach out the community.

During the hunt, children and families searched for plastic eggs hidden around vehicles and in the parking lot. The kids turned in the plastic eggs for a treat bag containing pencils, bubbles, markers, crafts, treats and a toy. Thirty-eight special "car" eggs were also placed around the property, and these could be exchanged for one of several prizes donated by local businesses.

In addition, Razberry the Clown provided balloons to children and photos were taken with the Easter Bunny.

The event was free. Donations were accepted for Canadian Tire's Jumpstart Charities.

Maple Magic concludes with country barn dance

Two weeks of maple-inspired fun in Minden came to a sweet finish at The Dominion Hotel on March 26. Local musician Gord Kidd and his Sap Sucking Friends (Ian Pay, Don Stiver, Steve Main and Shawn Chamberlin) performed for patrons during the country barn dance, and maple-infused drinks and food were featured. From March 12 to 26, the recently formed Minden Hills Business Association spearheaded Maple Magic. Several downtown businesses offered maple-themed specials at their establishments as part of the initiative.

A picture-perfect splash

By Mark Arike

Staff writer

Sixty-two brave souls risked getting soaked in front of a large crowd during this year's Spring Splash at Sir Sam's Ski/Ride.

Sunny skies and balmy temperatures made for ideal conditions for the year-end event on March 26. Participants were given one attempt to ski or snowboard across the 100-foot-long manmade pool, which was two-and-a-half feet deep at the midway point.

"Some will get wet, some will make it across," said Chris Bishop, general manager and co-owner of Sir Sam's.

A few participants dressed in costume while others took on the challenge in their regular winter attire. Several were successful and exited the pool with flair. Those who caught an edge, and weren't as fortunate, often ended up soaking spectators on the sidelines.

Prizes were awarded for costumes and the best splash.

The event has been an annual tradition for at least 30 years, said Bishop. In its early years, participants crossed a creek that ran along the bottom of the hill.

"We'd dam it up, so it was all determined by the weather," he recalled.

An après-ski dinner and dance featuring musician Carl Dixon capped off the day's festivities.

Facelift Fundraiser for a good cause

By Jennifer Hughey
Editor

There's nothing like bringing the community together in support of a good cause. And a catchy name.

In this case, it's the Haliburton Legion, and the event is the Facelift Fundraiser. On April 9, Legion members are looking to the public to come out and support their initiative to give their building, yes, a "facelift."

Spokesperson for the Legion, Rosemary Blight, said the decision was made jointly by some members and the Legion executive. Initially, organizers asked for donations during clubroom functions to buy paint for the main hall..

"The Legion [Hall] is an older building and is starting to show its age," Blight said. "In order to stay attractive ... for weddings and functions, some fresh paint and sprucing up was necessary." The Legion raises money by renting their facilities for events.

Blight said when the executive started looking into what was required, they discovered many areas that would need expensive upgrades to meet changing accessibility standards.

"...once we started to get pricing on the actual labour, we realized it really is more of a job than we anticipated," she said.

Haliburton Legion president Paul Sisson said the original building burnt down. He believes it was rebuilt in the early 1960s, with the addition being built in the 1970s.

The building will need a new heating system, new windows and full bathroom renovations.

Blight said the Legion has applied for a New Horizons for Seniors grant through the Ontario Government. According to the Employment and Social Development

Canada website, "organizations that want to help seniors make a difference in the lives of others and in their communities are eligible to receive federal grants and contributions funding."

"We are also in the process of applying for a Trillium grant, while we are waiting on notification [from] New Horizons," Blight said.

The fundraiser includes an open house where the community can come to see what the Legion is all about. It will include information on the renovations that need to be done.

"The plan at this point is to have a display in the Scofield Room as people enter, that will show what types of renovations we are looking at and the approximate associated costs," Blight said.

The executive hopes members of the community will sponsor portions of the renovations, as, in the past, they have not solicited donations outside of what they raise for Veterans and other local charities. They have had to depend on hall rentals and bar proceeds to pay their bills.

The fundraising committee is looking for items to offer during the live auction, as well as volunteers to bartend, sell tickets and assist with the event.

Attention all auctioneers: "We still need an auctioneer for the live auction," Blight said.

Tickets for the Facelift Fundraiser are $25 per person. Those interested in attending can call the Legion to reserve in advance at 705-457-2571 or drop in during the day to the Club Room at 719 Mountain St. in Haliburton.

Anyone looking to help through sponsorship or donations can email legionfacelift@hotmail.com for more information.
